The Churchillian

The pub on the hill

The Churchillian is situated on top of Portsdown Hill which is chalk escarpment estimated at 120 metres high. This is a tremendous vantage point for the pub to provide the most spectacular views across an area covering Portsmouth, the Isle of Wight and Hayling Island. Also, to the rear wonderful views can be seen of Southwick and the beautiful surrounding countryside.

But The Churchillian is more than just view. Upon entering the pub you will quickly realise the ambience is warm and friendly and caters for all tastes and needs. The menus available provide wholesome value for money fayre with a quick and attentive service from the management and the staff.

The interior décor is of a special significance as Sir Winston Churchill and the Allied forces planned the D-Day assault at nearby Southwick. Therefore, Sir Winston Churchill is very prominent in the furnishings of the pub and creates the historical theme.

You will find The Churchillian in the 2008 Good Beer Guide through providing an excellent choice of beers and lagers and the opportunity to enjoy traditional real ales maintained to a very high standard.

The pub also has a function room that even improves upon the views seen from the downstairs! This facility can be hired for family parties and celebrations.

Businesses frequently take advantage of this room and the excellent buffets that are available for their meetings and seminars.

The position of the pub provides plenty of car parking and a variety of beautiful walks are available to embark upon before or after your visit. The Churchillian has all the facilities for the discerning customer, arguably the best views on the south coast, an excellent range of food to be enjoyed in comfortable surroundings all complimented with superb variety of drinks at hand.
